

ASKS WOMEN'S CLUBS
TO HELP IMMIGRANTS

JANE ADDAMS URGES THEM TO EXTEND FELLOWSHIP TO FOREIGN WOMEN.

ROSS GIVES ADDRESS

University of Wisconsin Professor Advises Club Women Not to Accept Gifts of Ill-Gotten Wealth.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Chicago, June 16.—The story of the "devil baby" of Hull House was told by the head of that society center, Miss Jane Addams, to the convention of the general Federation of Women's Clubs here today. The story was told in connection with a statement that club women extend their fellowships to immigrant women, especially the older women. Miss Addams said that the origin of fairy stories seems to have been with primitive women to influence in a gentler way their brutal lords and masters.

Alarms Immigrants.
"There was of course no 'devil baby' but such currency did the story have that for some time the activities of Hull House were almost suspended. We explained to hundreds of immigrants who inquired that it was all a fairy story," said Miss Addams. "Finally we placed detectives at work to find out to whom the Italian priest, who tore down a sacred picture when he was angered and declared that he would rather have a devil in the house than his wife. When a child was born, the story, 'It was a devil, with horns and hoofs and tail complete.'"

"The Jewish version differed but little," continued Miss Addams. "It concerned a father whose wife had borne him seven daughters, and the approach of the eighth, swore that he would rather have a devil in the house than another daughter, and the story concluded with the birth of the devil child. In both cases the frightened parents had brought the imps to Hull House."

Miss Addams explained that the story is like the old fairy stories originated by the primitive women to influence the men folk or daughters to prevent the sacrifice of the Indians or the brutality of the Jews."

Prof. Ross Speaks.
"Gifts of ill-gotten wealth should be passed back to the top of the river, until he can give evidence of repentance and restitution," declared R. A. Ross, professor of sociology of the University of Wisconsin, here today in an address to the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

"Such gifts cost society more than they are worth," he said. "This is a terrible shock to the system of religious or private philanthropy. Private benevolence should be restricted to experimental work said Professor Ross. 'The state depends,' he said, 'should be cared for by the state.'"

He said that the conditions of immigrant women, industrial and social conditions of women and children, civics and school problems were the subjects of addresses scheduled for today.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

STALWARTS PREPARE FOR STATE MEETING

Philipp and His Aids Bent Every Effort to Secure Large Attendance at Convention Next Week.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., June 16.—Every effort is being bent by the backers of the so-called stalwart movement to have a large attendance at the state convention called to meet here one week from today. The letters received by Madison citizens urged their attendance. In each of these letters a long printed statement in the form of an interview with Emanuel La Philipp giving his ideas "about one man rule." There is also a ducted government. "There is also a blank asking that names be secured to the petition calling for the state convention. Some of the letters are sent to former members of the legislature and are signed by C. H. Kelsey. In one of the form letters Mr. Kelsey says:

No Faction Revival.
"This movement is not intended as a revival of any faction or party in the state, nor is it in the interest of any one man. It is intended as a get-together meeting of those who have believed in the old time principles of the republican party and who do not view with favor many of the new 'isms' which have been grafted upon the party tree in this state."

"I do not know how keen an interest you have taken in the affairs of the state since leaving the legislature, but I do know that we have sadly needed headed business men in our recent legislatures. Trusting that you will feel inclined to put your shoulder to the wheel and give the movement a forward push, I remain, etc."

The letter head on the correspondence is conducted has on it in large type: "Republican State Convention Committee." The names of C. W. Whitehead, chairman, and Cameron W. Frazer, secretary, and campaign manager, are also printed on the letter. At the top of the letter head printed in red letters is this earnest appeal: "We demand good state government at a reasonable cost and a moderate protective tariff to encourage business."

Inquiry made here today failed to reveal the meeting place of the convention, which is scheduled for 2 p. m. next Tuesday. It was said, however, some negotiations had been made to hold it in the opera house, where the last stalwart convention was held in 1905.

MINNESOTA VOTERS
AT THE POLLS TODAY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
St. Paul, June 16.—The heaviest rain in the history of the state was predicted here today when voters flocked to the polls to choose their candidates for the state, legislative, congressional and county offices. Governor A. C. Eberhart concluded yesterday a hot speaking campaign during which he reached nearly every portion of the state.

W. E. Lee, candidate for the Republican nomination against Eberhart, is backed by the anti-machine Republicans and has attacked the governor's administration as inefficient and charged Eberhart with being the tool of the liquor interests. The Democrats are making a choice between W. Hammond and Daniel W. Lawler. Old-time politicians declare Hammond's popularity will secure him the nomination.

The Progressives are placing their hopes for success in the November election in Herbert A. Hubert, a personal friend of Colonel Roosevelt. A three-cornered fight for the office of state auditor is being watched with interest today. J. A. Preuss, Julius Block and Henry Mora are the candidates.

PLAN HEARINGS TO FIX MINIMUM WAGE

State Industrial Commission Will Make Decision Following a Thorough Investigation.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., June 16.—Contrary to the expectations of manufacturers and business men throughout Wisconsin, no minimum wage for women employees will be fixed on July 1st. This was announced today by C. H. Crowhart, chairman of the industrial commission. The commission announced also that it would hold public hearings this week as follows: Superior, Wednesday, June 17; Eau Claire, Thursday, June 18; La Crosse, Friday, June 19.

"It is not the intention to subpoena any one or even to urge their attendance. We are simply extending to employers and an opportunity to express themselves on the minimum wage principle and to ask questions of the commission," said Mr. Crowhart.

"Letters to the commission and statements made in many parts of the state indicate that there is a general misunderstanding of the intention of the commission regarding the minimum wage law. A signed communication which recently appeared in the Milwaukee paper indicated that the commission intended to fix an arbitrary minimum wage on July 1. This is not true. The law does not go into effect on July 1, but at the same time the statute leaves it to the commission to establish the wage only after a thorough investigation. It is not the intention of the commission to handle this important question impulsively or with half-truths. The commission will not act until it has gathered full information. Moreover, it will not act until every employer involved in the question has been given an opportunity to express his opinion."

"In order that this opportunity may be given with the least trouble and annoyance to employers, the commission will announce its itinerary which will include cities of industrial importance. In the meantime we should like to make it clear that no minimum wage will be set on July 1st, or within two months of that date."

KING AND QUEEN AT FAMOUS ASCOT RACES

Ascot, Eng., June 16.—The elite of British and European society flocked to the royal hunt today for the opening of the Ascot race meeting, the most fashionable and aristocratic race meeting of the English turf season. King George and Queen Mary, accompanied by the royal household, were in state from Windsor castle, riding in an open four-horse carriage with postillions and outriders wearing the picturesque Ascot liveries.

HIGH TAX MEETING HELD AT MANITOWOC

Residents in Manitowoc County Take Similar Steps Against High Taxes
as Rock County.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Manitowoc, Wis., June 16.—Manitowoc county's protest against the present rates of taxation was expected to be made public this afternoon, following a mass meeting to which delegates were expected from all parts of the county.

A committee will be named to act in conjunction with committees from other counties. The call for the meeting was made through the distribution of thousands of circulars reading as follows:

"Conditions in the state of Wisconsin are of such a character that new taxes must take notice. Year after year for the past ten years our taxes have increased without just cause until the burden too great to bear. Our individual protests have been in vain. We have been promised relief only to be deceived. New boards and commissions to squander money in useless and unnecessary activities, a system of taxes whose only function is to place additional burdens on property already too heavily taxed, a multitude of new offices to eat up the revenues derived from such new taxation, is the only answer."

PACIFIC COAST CHINESE
EXPECT NEW REVOLUTION TO OVERTHROW MANCHUS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
San Francisco, June 16.—An "up and down the Pacific coast" plus are said to be ripening in the various oriental colonies for another revolution in China. The same movement is being pushed elsewhere throughout the country but it is on the coast that it has made the greatest progress. The campaign is said to be under the general direction of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, who was first president of the republic of China and was mainly responsible for the revolution which overthrew the Manchus. Sun is an exile in Japan and President Yuan Shi-kai is reported to have offered $1,000,000 for his head.

In the United States the agitator is being done up by Y. P. Hsieh, for whom, dead or alive, Yuan is said to have offered $100,000. Hsieh has toured the country and professed to have found strong financial backing. He is authority for the statement that the revolt is already simmering in Central China and may be expected to break out in full violence within the next few months.

The agitators charge Yuan with having undone all the work of the revolution and established a despotism of his own under the name of a republic. Some of them give him credit of being a firm believer in a despotic form of government for China but they say they do not propose to submit to merely because he is sincere in thinking it desirable.

CLOSED CHICAGO BANK
TO BE REORGANIZED, SAYS MUNDAY;
WOMAN'S SUIT AGAINST STATE AUDITOR BRADY CAUSED CRASH

THE LA SALLE STREET
TRUST & SAVINGS BANK

Crowds about the LaSalle Street Trust and Savings Bank after it was closed, and its president, former Senator Lorimer.

Kuhns, whom he had married contrary to the state law. The suit led to charges that the office was conducted for the benefit of spoilsmen, and an investigation then showed the weakness of the Munday-Lorimer banks.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE
BY STORM IN PARIS

Great Holes Washed In Principal
Streets, While Toll of Lives and Property Loss Is Unknown.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Paris, June 16.—Parts of Paris presented a scene of devastation today with rapidly holes in some of the main thoroughfares, as a result of yesterday's storm. The entire city is deprived of water, gas, electricity, which are cut off against floods, explosions and fires.

Several lives were lost through vehicles falling into cavities in the street, but the number of dead is not known. This morning some bodies were believed to have fallen into the sewers. Heavy rains today added to the difficulties.

Action was taken to prevent the public from approaching spots of danger. Many streets were barred to wheeled traffic entirely, while the walls of loop kept back pedestrians to a safe distance.

A street collapse occurred early today in the district of Mont Moret, behind the great cemetery, far from the other caverns.

When communication with the suburbs had been partly restored today, it was learned that fruit and vegetable growers suffered immensely from the storm.

Several more buildings collapsed in various parts of Paris today owing to the weight of the soil caused by yesterday's terrific storm.

Bodies were recovered today from a deep hole at the junction of the Rue Du Havre, and the boulevard Haussmann, near the St. Lazare station.

Another location the walls of a building under construction fell and two working men were seriously injured.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

PRESENT DIPLOMAS TO RURAL STUDENTS

One Hundred Eighteen Pupils of County Schools Receive Certificates at Exercises Today.

Beginning at one-thirty this afternoon, the rural schools commencement program was given at the high school, before an audience numbering some three hundred rural school graduates, parents and friends. Superintendent O. D. Antisdel opened with a few remarks, and was followed by a short program leading up to the main address by E. J. Lowth, and the presentation of diplomas. Stanley Woodward rendered a vocal solo, Myrtle Gower followed with a selection on the violin. Certificates were presented to 118 students.

Principal E. J. Lowth of the Rock County Training School delivered the address of the afternoon, outlining carefully his main points and arguments, based upon his own experience. "The Mexicans are ignorant," went on the speaker, "because they have no schools such as are found in this country. They have no ambition, and are consequently of what good? The Mexican and American student is a great contrast, a great comparison. I urge upon every one of you this afternoon, who are about to receive your diplomas, from the rural schools, to get a higher education. If you want to get a higher education, you must be willing to get it. Be live wires and get the top. Wake up to things about you and acquire a determination to work. I ask you, how hard can you work? Can you make a big effort? You will find that many times in your lives, efforts and hard work will be necessary, so prepare yourself now."

"How do you amuse yourself?" continued Mr. Lowth. "You all know that at first you learn to read, and after that to reach the essential you are ready to read to learn. The average person does not read very much, the reason being, because they do not care to."

Our habits are a big asset in attaining success. Self-reliance, thoughtfulness, accuracy, observation and the power of clean cut articulation, coupled with so great a number of other powers are habits which make the men and women of today into successful, broad-minded people, striving to reach the top.

"As you go on," concluded the speaker, "I hope you will have a desire to take up higher school work, and attain the highest success I can offer. Set a high standard and there stick to it. There are some students who are examinations today that are not prepared for them. It is up to you to prove that you are prepared. I sympathize and congratulate you, especially urge most strongly that you make good, mainly through the power of holding on to your good habits, and throwing away the bad ones."

Following are the pupils who received diplomas today:

This annual production placed before the public on the green is without doubt, one of the biggest annual spectacles in this city, as shown by the enormous crowds that assemble about the natural amphitheatre in the rear of Court House park. Over three thousand people witnessed the pageant last week, which number is easily a thousand more than was in attendance at the 1913 event.

FOOTVILLE TRIMS UP EDGERTON LEAGUERS

Footville Y. M. C. A. county baseball nine opened the new Rock County League last Friday afternoon at Edgerton, by trimming the Tobacco City team five to two in an interesting contest.

Lentz whiffed fifteen batsmen, while his brother, R. Lentz, secured three whallops, bringing in two runs. Edgerton previously as sure topnotchers in the race, Footville is confident now of winning the pennant.

PRINCIPALS FINISH TRAINING FOR BOUT

McMahon and Kelly Put Finishing Touches to Strenuous Work for Wednesday Night Contest.

It will be light work from now on for both Montana Jack Kelly and Pittsburgh Jack McMahon, the heavy training having been finished last night. Kelly is down at Beloit, and McMahon all he wants, Scotty has in first class shape. "Merely a good stiff practice," is the way his friends characterize it. He will weigh in Luther McCarthy is going to surprise

McMahon said he was through with active work.

He weighed 178 last night and will drop off a pound more before Wednesday, entering the squared circle at 177. This will be less than Kelly will weigh in at, but McMahon expects to make up the difference in speed and endurance. He has dropped some twenty-five pounds since he began training, and except for his usual golf game will do no hard work.

Young Cox went his usual route before some critical judges. He boxed hard and fast, is much improved in his foot work, and if he keeps his head he should give Young Scotty of Milwaukee all he wants. Scotty has somewhat the advantage of having had more battles, but Cox is cool and heady.

Sport Snap Shots

Bat Nelson, one-time lightweight champ, agreed to mount the stage at an exhibition of hypnotism at Cary, Ind., the other day and act as a subject. The announcement was made previous to the performance and the result was that many attended eager to see whether or not the man could make the famous exp-pug act silly. Bat barked like a dog, dressed up as a lady in a slit skirt and flounced around the stage. It was popularly supposed that Bat was in town for the day on a business trip and merely agreed to be the goat in the entertainment out of the goodness of his heart. However, it was learned later that Bat and the hypnotic person had been seen in earnest conversation but a few days before. An, quite a few of those who paid fifty cents to see the performance began to feel that somehow they were badly roped in.

It is complained by some that the seeds make the mistake of dragging their games out to too great a length. For instance, in Chicago the other day an umpire and a batter couldn't agree on a little point about a strike and they discussed the matter for quite a while, most of the players in the meantime reclining on the grass or going into the clubhouse to write a few letters. The Fed umpires would do well to refuse to listen to argumentative players. Fans like the games that hustle along with a minimum of needless delay.

There was a right earnest young riot in Sidney, Australia, the other day when the referee gave the decision to Jeff Smith, though Jimmy Clabby had the fight by a mile. It was a most unjust decision and that there was a violent demonstration from the fans is not surprising. Not that Clabby has such a host of intimate acquaintances in Australia, however. It was the betters who had their money on the losing end who grew so indignant.

Many fight fans thought that it was especially foolhardy of Johnny Coulton to take on Kid Williams when he was not in proper shape and had only recently recovered from a trying illness. The prevalent notion seems to be, however, that Coulton knew that he must make the jump sooner or later and that he would have to give up his title before much longer. That the big majority felt that Coulton's career was near an end is shown by the betting odds against him.

Pete Schneider should fit in nicely with the Cincinnati Reds and make a great hit with the fans. His name at least will look well on the score card with the rest of the Cincinnati line-up.

Hans Wagner made his three-thousandth base hit the other day. It was well worth a modest little celebration and Hans received many expressions of good will and felicitations, especially from opposing pitchers, who wished him many returns of the day—but scarcely so you would notice it.

Englishmen complain that American athletes specialize too much and that that's the reason why we are able to lick them in individual events.

Rock Balanced Over Village.
A 20-ton balanced rock overhangs the village of Thomary in France.

JACK MCMAHON.

Wednesday afternoon and be ready for McMahon when the gong taps at the Myers Theatre in the evening, in the pink of condition.

That McMahon and his strenuous training has attracted considerable attention here was evidenced last evening when a hundred interested "fans" watched him box eight rounds, fast and hard, with his sparring partners. He did his usual bag punching skit, skip the rope innumerable times, do his usual shadow boxing and wind up with a fast and furious three round knock out battle with "Sailor" Murphy. Then Janesville followers when he dons the mitts with Bobby Ward. While Ward has the advantage of several contests, McCarthy is taking no chances and has trained faithfully and is mighty clever. He keeps hammering at his opponent and does not seem afraid of punishment. He indicates that he will make a good boxer in time.

AMUSEMENTS

THE APOLLO.

Evangeline Longfellow's wonderful poem, is being told in motion pictures at the Apollo theatre tonight for the last time. As nearly everyone knows it is a beautiful story. The dramatization is in two epochs and five parts. Part one depicts the boyhood of Evangeline and Gabriel. Part two is the wooing and wedding. Part three, the invading of the soldiers and capture and exile of the men of Arcadia. Part four is the separation. "So unto separate ships were Basil and Gabriel carried, while in despair on the shore stood Evangeline and her father." Part five is the second epoch showing years of wandering and searching and finally the reunion. "All are ended now, the hope, and the fear, and the sorrow."

PUNGENT FACTS.

It takes the virile pen of former Governor W. D. Hoard to call a spade a spade in Wisconsin politics and force home a truth with such vigor that it can not be mistaken for a sugar-coated pill by those who receive it. In his last issue of the Jefferson County Union, Governor Hoard says some facts in such plain language that they can not fail to be understood by all who read them. He does not mince words in talking, but hits out from the shoulder when he says: "And now comes W. W. Powell in the Milwaukee Free Press at the instigation and support of that paper and tells the farmers and taxpayers of Wisconsin in effect that they are a pack of fools who don't know what they are talking about when they rise up in protest against the divine right of this progressive state government to tax them, exploit them, fence them up with laws destructive of their political and industrial life."

"This man Powell has set out to sweeten and sugar-coat the bitter dose of misgovernment and misrule that the La Follette and McGovern demagogues have fastened upon the state. The taxpayers of the state are insultingly told that they are responsible for all the burdensome taxes, for all the foot laws that have increased our state expense 100 per cent in fourteen years, while the population has increased only 12 1/2 per cent."

"The truth is the voters did not foresee the trap they were being led into when La Follette enjoin them into adopting the primary law which effectually silenced the voice of the people and put the nominating and governing power in the hands of a few ruling politicians in the progressive party. La Follette knew what he was talking about when he said to Attorney General Bliss, 'tell you that if you will support this primary law there is no power on earth that can get us out of office.' They gave the common people fenced up and fenced in like so many sheep. There is no longer any substantial party organization that the oppressed taxpayer can appeal to. With a cunning that is almost devilish these progressives have tied the peoples' hands so that the taxpayers look one another in the face and say, 'Is there any escape from these devourers of our substance in the name of progressive reform?' And now they are trying to raise the old stuffed scare crowd to raise the old days and tell us that every man who has lost confidence in these men who have made the name 'progressive' a synonym of oppression and crazy misrule are enemies of the state. Did you ever hear of such crazy effrontery before?"

"After having crucified the republican party and the cause of sane conservative government on the cross of progressivism they tell us that bitter the dose is, it was of our own seeking. A bigger and more flaunting lie was never imposed on any people of any state."

"The whole scheme was cooked up by Robert M. La Follette in order that 'No power on earth should get him and his kind out of office.' Since the day of the primary there has not been a single platform or public demand that has originated with the common people."

"All of this great mass of progressive legislation that now weighs the state down with a burden of eighteen million dollars a year, not a dollar of it was called for by the people of Wisconsin. Not a dollar of this vast expense has been wrung from their pockets since they have been deceived by a cunningly devised scheme to submerge the voter and elevate the demagogue and make the voter pay for it."

"Mr. Powell pretends to speak for the public sentiment of the taxpayers. He knows as little of that sentiment as any other man who knows nothing at all about it. The fact is progressivism is being weighed in the balance of a process of evolution is going on in the public mind."

"The humbug theories of progress that these high taxes have put forth are coming now under the mighty squeeze of the query, 'Can we afford such an expensive government?' Can we afford such a host of officials, commissions and the terrible bill of expense they are creating?"

"Can we afford to pander to the ambition of President Van Hise to make of the state university the most expensive school of its kind in the United States? Can we afford to turn our state government and the law-making power, the tax levying power over to a lot of university professors?"

"Can we afford to retire as a people from the government of Wisconsin?"

and turn it over to a lot of progressive politicians who show by their works that they have not a grain of conservative common sense in their heads. And what is more can we afford to take the excuse that the Free Press and the Powells and the McGoverns and the Morrisles are putting up for their fearful delinquencies in managing the affairs of the state? Can we afford so expensive a luxury as their society any longer? The Union believes that deep down in their hearts the common people of this state see the issue in its right light and will vote accordingly."

The Milwaukee Journal believes that the September primaries this year will be a good test for the value of the state primary law. Why this law was tested and found a failure six years ago when Stephenson was named as the choice of the majority of republicans of the state at the primary and repudiated by the republican politicians at the session of the legislature.

Judge Maxfield has intimated that violators of the automobile and motorcycle speed ordinances may be sentenced to the stone quarry to work out their fines if they do not pay them. Well, the quarry is being rushed for products and a few more able workers could be used to advantage.

Dahl has entered the race for governor. The La Follette men claim they did not want him to, but just the same they are rocking to his banner by the scores, and behind it all will be found the quiet order for them to do so coming from La Follette's basement committee room at Washington.

Hirta has not yet resigned and present indications are that he does not intend to. He remains quietly at the City of Mexico and once in a while his generals war a fight when there is need, just to show the rebels they can do it if they want to.

The stalwart republican county convention is to be held here tomorrow. Between non-partisan gatherings and stalwart meetings Rock county managers to have a few conventions even if they were driven out of existence by the primary law.

Wilson has his Panama canal repeal bill passed, signed and in effect. Now he can turn his attention to something else. For instance, discovering why the dove of peace does not like the climate at Niagara Falls.

Tom Morris, senatorial aspirant, is still talking about matters he knows nothing about. Morris is a wonderful "spieler" and never loses an opportunity to exploit his own greatness.

Beloit is having a spasm of reform just at present. Janesville went through a similar cleaning up and the officers are still on the watch to capture some violators so it is in the air.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

"DO IT NOW!"
A CERTAIN friend of mine invariably answers all letters on the day she receives them.

When I praised her for her promptness one day, she answered, "It isn't because I'm good; it's because it's the easiest way. If I let it lie around on my desk and hang fire for a week or so, answering it seems to me like a terrible burden."

How true that is of all kinds of tasks!

Show that you are afraid to attack them, let them get the upper hand of you, and the first thing you know they are towering over your head and shutting out the sunshine of life.

But go at them without any show of fear or reluctance, and they dwindle to nothing before you.

Take some little task like the breakfast dishes, for example. If you get up from the breakfast table and without stopping to think what a nuisance they are, advance boldly upon them, you will have them done in no time, and maybe even catch yourself singing over the dish-pan.

But if you eye them with disfavor and decide you'll read the paper awhile before attacking them, and then remember the struggle to tidy up a neighbor, when you come back a half hour later you find that the breakfast table with the dishes upon it and the crumbs and the half emptied coffee cups has become an almost insurmountable task. The task of clearing it off looms like a mountain before you. You approach it slowly and distastefully, and the task probably takes you twice as long as if you had gone promptly about it.

It's the same way with bed-making. Were you ever wickered enough to leave your beds until after dinner? bed with the afternoon sun lying upon it. It seems to reproach you, and you approach it with a piece of disagreeable news to someone who had to hear it. I can hardly describe to you how my dread of announcing it grew. I had disliked the thought at first, but my dislike changed by leaps and bounds into a positive aversion. I simply couldn't make the plunge. As the gentleman in the comic section says, "Never again!"

So, if you have anything hard or disagreeable to do, do it now! Fly at it, drive it before you. You will be astonished to see how it dwindles the moment you lay your hand upon it. And the best of all, you will be surprised to find how much more easily you will approach the next unpleasant task.

Heart and Home Problems

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl fifteen years old. I have been using buttermilk three weeks.

(1) I am very nervous. What should I do to get over it?

(2) My teeth always bleed at night. What should I do to stop this?

(3) What causes an ingrowing toenail?

(4) Will embroidered dresses be in vogue this summer?

(5) Could you give me a game which would be suitable for boys and girls of my age to play in the evening?

A NORWEGIAN GIRL.

(1) Buttermilk may be too mild for you. You might try pure lemon juice. Apply it at night and let it soak on; then wash off in the morning with very hot water and a mild soap. It may make the skin sore. If so, massage a little after washing with cold cream, then wipe this off and dust the face lightly with a good rice powder or talcum powder. To get rid of freckles one must take off the skin, too. It is a long and tedious process. Most of the freckle cures recommended are very injurious to the skin. Better have freckles than ruin your skin.

TUBERCULOSIS

In addition to plenty of fresh air and proper diet, those suffering from it who are predisposed to Tuberculosis are recommended to use Eckman's Alterative to stop night sweats, banish fever and hasten recovery. This medicine, by reason of its successful use during the past, warrants the fullest investigation possible by every sufferer.

Eckman's Alterative is a powerful cathartic in bronchial catarrh and severe throat and lung affections, and in upbuilding the system. It contains no narcotics, nor harmful or habit-forming drugs. Accept no substitutes. Send for leading druggists. Write to the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries.

1. The quickest way to remove skin blemishes is by shampooing with a good hair tonic. Apply it to the scalp and hair, and wash it out with cold water. This will remove the dirt and oil from the scalp and hair, and will also remove the blemishes. Apply it to the face and neck, and wash it out with cold water. This will remove the dirt and oil from the face and neck, and will also remove the blemishes.

2. Your weak, languid feeling is probably caused by impure blood, or a condition of the organs of elimination. In either case, a tonic and purgative will prove effective in restoring health and energy. Apply to the stomach and bowels a small amount of castor oil, and a few drops of lemon juice. This will stimulate the bowels and restore the normal action of the organs of elimination. The result will be a purer blood and a more vigorous system.

(2) Wear shoes to fit—neither too tight nor too large. Keep the feet absolutely clean. Change your stockings often. Wash your feet in cold water every day. Take a piece of lemon or banana skin and bind the white side against the corn. Put on a fresh piece night and morning. It will soon relieve the pain and in time you can cut out the corn.

(3) Not fast enough to alarm her. I shouldn't think that either you or the girl could enjoy yourselves very much if you drove very fast.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am 15 years old and considered small. I am 4 ft. 10 in. I would like to be bigger. Would you please tell me what to do so I can grow?

A. B. C.

You will probably grow taller as you get older. Ask your father to put up a turning pole in some part of your yard or in a doorway in the house. Hang to this and swing back and forth several times a day. This will help to stretch your little. Eat plenty of good food, take plenty of exercise, breathe deep, sleep nine to ten hours, in every 24 hours, have good thoughts, and you will grow into a fine healthy woman.

ECONOMICAL USE OF MEAT IN THE HOME.

In these days of the high cost of provisions, when the price of meat is especially soaring, it behooves the housewife to consider well all possible methods of economizing in her use of this costly foodstuff. Perhaps she will approve of the advice of the vegetarian, and banish meat entirely from her table. Whether this is a wise course to pursue, however, is to be questioned, for the consensus of opinion among the majority of those who have given special attention to the subject is that flesh foods are a wholesome and normal part of the diet.

The value of a meat as a food depends chiefly on the presence of two classes of nutrients, protein, which is essential for the construction and repair of the body, and fat, which, together with the protein, yields energy for muscular power and for keeping up the temperature of the body. The mineral matter which it contains is also of much importance, though small in quantity. It is possible to obtain all of the necessary protein and energy from other materials, but for many reasons it is doubtful if such a proceeding would be either desirable or wise for the average person. Exactly how much meat should be eaten is a difficult matter to determine; probably if the housekeeper serves one meat dish a day, supplemented by other materials supplying protein, such as milk, eggs, and beans, there will be little danger of getting too much meat or too little protein. If the diet has a normal amount of fruit, vegetables, and other foods, as it should, mineral matter and other important constituents will be supplied also. It is but natural that the vigorous out-of-door man should require a larger amount of meat than the one who leads a sedentary life, just as he would also require more bread, butter and other foods.

The first opportunity to economize occurs in the marketing. To secure the best results each housekeeper should familiarize herself with the various kinds and cuts of meats, and do her buying in person. Different kinds and cuts of meat vary greatly in price. Sometimes the cheaper cuts contain a larger proportion of refuse than the actual cost of the edible portion. Aside from this the advantage of the more expensive cuts lies in tenderness and flavor rather than in nutritive value. Recent experiments have shown that there is very little difference between the various cuts and kinds of meat, so far as either the amount of protein, or the thoroughness and ease of digestion is concerned. Therefore, those who wish to use the cheaper cuts need not feel that in so doing their families will be less well nourished than by the more expensive meats.

Carefully following the market and taking advantage of any opportunity that may offer also helps to reduce the outlay for meat. A consideration of the taste of the members of the family will go a long way toward saving waste. Economy is also furthered by a careful serving at the table, where each person should be given no more than he wishes or ordinarily eats. There can be no doubt that too much meat is consumed in many homes. A more healthful and economical diet may be secured by serving fish, milk, eggs, cheese, etc., in place of an excess of meat.

Women Worth While

MRS. DORSEY W. SHACKLEFORD.

(By Selene Armstrong Harmon.)

Take a modern Pandora's box, fill it with blessings instead of ill, and set it before the average congressman. If he could draw from it single good which every man in politics must yearn to bestow upon the womenfolk of his family, he would choose the modest and underrated virtue, discretion.

There is a fortunate man in congress whose wife possesses this virtue in marked degree. That man is Representative Dorsey W. Shackelford of Missouri. Those friends of Mrs. Shackelford's who know her best always like to say of her, when this or that woman is being held up as sole shaper and creator of her husband's career:

Now, take Mrs. Shackelford. She never tried her hand at shaping a career. But in the fifteen years that her husband has been in public life she has never made an enemy for him. In other words, her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace.

With Mrs. Shackelford this is not a matter of policy. It is a matter of temperament. She looks out upon the world and people with the eyes of kindness, and with that tolerance which eventually makes friends of the enemy. In her gentle and unobtrusive way, she has played a more constructive part in her husband's career than many of those women conspicuous for their qualities of leadership.

Mrs. Shackelford before her marriage was Miss Florida Lee Hall of Missouri. She was one of eight children, and she learned domestic science in the best school in the world, her mother's kitchen.

Among her earliest recollections today are her home-comings from a private school, where she was sent when her mother's health failed. When she returned to her father's country place for holidays and week ends it was always to assume command of the numerous negro servants who in that day were part of every big plantation household. In her childhood desire to protect a frail and well-beloved mother from household cares she soon gained a woman's knowledge of how meals should be prepared. To this day she believes that there is no course in domestic science which can teach a girl any more about practical housekeeping than she learns at home, if she assumes there the duties that should fall to her lot.

As the result of this early training Mrs. Shackelford is today essentially a domestic woman. After a fifteen years' residence in Washington, during which time she has seen more of the glamor of official life than falls to the lot of most women, she still unconsciously plays the role of the old-fashioned woman. She is not a club woman. She is in sympathy with the cause of equal suffrage, but believes the enfranchisement of women is a matter for the states, individually, not the federal government, to settle. Mrs. Shackelford is fond of society and because of her long residence at the capital has numerous friends there. She and her husband, Agnes, who is one of the most popular girls in the congressional set.

Every Day Talks To Every Day People

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

The only successful way of getting rid of mosquitoes is in destroying their breeding place, or protecting the same in a manner that will prevent their breeding. These breeding places are generally empty bottles and cans in yards, streets, and alleys, undrained and stagnant pools of water more than ten days old—the average breeding time of the mosquito. When one is bothered with mosquitoes it is safe to say that their breeding place is within the radius of a block. All low places should be drained. If you are the owner of a rain-barrel it should be mosquito-proof. A top-coating of oil will not hurt the water for domestic purposes and it will effectively put a stop to any mosquito breeding there.

Tall weeds and grass, where the ground is damp, are also ideal places for their breeding and should be eliminated from one's yard in every possible instance. Pyrethrum powder, which is procured from any drug store, will, if burned in a smoke can, quickly rid the house of these disturbing little pests, as the fumes stupefy them and they fall to the floor and can be easily swept up.

There are many kinds of flies, but the two most common, most dangerous to human life are the house and stable fly. The stable fly bites and lives upon the blood of animals. It does not eat ordinary food, so is harder to catch than the house fly, but sticky fly-paper and swatters can put them out of business.

The house fly comes about the house, in it it can, and eats and walks upon our food. The fact that it has been walking on most every conceivable filth before it makes its call at our plate should be a strong factor against him. They bring typhoid, consumption, summer complaint and many other diseases, into our homes.

Both of these flies breed in filth, especially in manure. The stable fly will breed in lawn clippings and weeds. In parts of China where all manure and garbage is carried away daily, it is claimed the flies have disappeared.

A solution of one and one-half pounds of salt to a gallon of water, or one quart of kerosene to a gallon of water, if sprinkled about each week, will prevent flies from hatching to any extent. Where there is manure the best preventive is one pound of borax to about eight bushels of manure. Sprinkle it on the pile, then sprinkle water on to wash the borax in.

There should be no space between an outhouse building and the ground, so that light or flies can get in. Flies will not go into a dark place. If we put them in their extermination will be less work.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Use an ordinary blackboard eraser to wipe down your stairway. It will take up every bit of dirt and also lint.

When window shades have become cracked and broken, get a small can of oil paint and go over them. They will wear for years.

If you are not fortunate to have an ice box, here is a good substitute: Get a large box, knock the bottom out, then dig a hole in your collar just large enough for the box to fit in. About twice a week clean it out and sprinkle a little borax around. You will find everything nice and cool.

As soon as tea is split and a tablecloth cover the stain with common salt. Leave it for a while and when the cloth is washed all stains will have disappeared.

THE TABLE.

Orange Ice—Four cups of water.

NE thing remember. Think strong. If you think you can't do it, you can't. If you think you can't, you can't. If you think you can't, you can't.

TIMELY RECIPES.

Thomas Carlyle called the human stomach "that most diabolical of all machines," which proved that he had a stomach which had been misused. The most perfect disposition will not endure the constant irritation of indigestion. It thus behooves the food providers to so serve food to our growing youth that this biting epigram shall be a falsehood.

Apple Loaf.—Take from the raised dough sufficient to make a small loaf. Work into it a tablespoonful of butter, one-third of a cupful of sugar, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of cinnamon and two well-beaten eggs. Add flour sufficient to make a soft dough, knead lightly and let rise. Divide into thirds and roll out each piece the size of the pan. Lay on one piece and spread with an inch layer of sour chopped apple. Four over a tablespoonful of melted butter and a sprinkling of sugar, and lay on the next layer of dough. Cover this with a layer of apple.

Potato Tea Cakes.—Cook and dice four meaty potatoes, add two well-beaten eggs, one teaspoonful of salt and a pint of milk. Mix together a cupful each of flour and cornstarch with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add this to the potato mixture, roll out and cut into small biscuits. Bake in a hot oven.

Rice and Green Peppers.—Cook rice and season well with butter and salt; heap in a dish and set in the oven. Cut green peppers into rings, soak in salt water a half hour. Drain and fry in a little butter in a hot frying pan. Then arrange these rings over the top of the dish of rice.

AFTER THE DANCE

Stop Burning Aching Feet

Soothe and cool them instantly with wonderful cacao essence. Destroy all odor, too.

It is foolish to soak and swell and parboil sore, aching feet. Needless to say, strong, medicated foot soaps and liniments. Why putter with greasy soaps or powders that sift and abrade?

Learn what thousands know about wonderful cacao essence. It cools and refreshes the moment applied. It penetrates instantly to neutralize poisons of perspiration. It is clear, odorless; dries immediately.

Clear cacao essence is fine for all clothing that smells. All perspiration odor vanishes. It does not stain or harm.

One single test will prove all this. Get cacao powder from your druggist, have him dissolve it to make a full pint of the essence. We refund the cost if it does not please you. C. A. Smith & Co., Manufacturing Chemists, Beloit, Wis.

HONOR ROLL LIST BELOW 1913 MARK

DIFFERENCE OF TWO WINTERS
IN ATTENDANCE AND TARDI-
NESS IS BUT FIVE.

RETAIN HIGH AVERAGE

Past Nine Months Closes with 164 on Roll—Adams School Boasts of Holding Lead With 38.

Despite the unfairness for some schools competing in the race for highest honors in the honor credit list annually given out because of the difference in number of pupils attending, the interest during the past nine months among the graded school children about the city has been intense in every respect. One hundred and sixty-four names are found on the list just completed, or five less than the number that totaled the 1912 list. In 1912 the total number of names mentioned was but 121, or a very low average to the later marks set. It means a lot for a pupil to be able to go to school every day in the school year, to say nothing of being present every morning and noon on time, thus escaping these red tardy marks from being chalked up against his name. Such a plan is a fine part in keeping many more children from being on the lists, and were it not for this cause an admirable record of honor roll students might be recorded each year.

During the past year an honor roll was taken at Thanksgiving time, another at Christmas, and the third one at Easter time. All of these were published with long lists. The list published below contains the names of those who were present in school and on time every day since last September. The marks set the 1913 and 1914 should be an inspiration to all children to try and work harder in increasing future lists to at least two or three hundred.

The 164 pupils on this year's roll are not very evenly divided. The Adams, Washington and Jefferson schools leading with 38, 33 and 20, respectively. The list of those honored on the 1914 list follows:

GIVE PRETTY PARTY AT COUNTRY CLUB

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Matheson Entertain for Their Daughter, Miss Marian Matheson.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander E. Matheson of St. Lawrence avenue, entertained a company of eighty young people last evening at the country club for their daughter, Miss Marian Matheson, who was a member of the 1913 graduation class at the Janesville high school. Dancing was enjoyed between the hours of eight and twelve, a delightful dance program being furnished by Miss Gertrude McGilley and Miss Marion Matheson. The hall was decorated with a mass of daisies and green foliage, which made a very pretty effect. Lemon and strawberry punch was served during the evening, followed by refreshments of ice cream and cake at the close of the dance program.

CLINTON

Clinton, June 15.—Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Collier will attend the commencement exercises at the state university. Their daughter, Marguerite, is one of the graduates.

Mrs. James Winegar and Mrs. V. C. Tuttle attended the funeral of an intimate friend at Janesville Sunday. P. W. Herron left Saturday evening for Sturgeon Bay to attend the annual grand lodge of the Knights of Pythias. A. A. Cleveland left Sunday and P. M. Barkus expects to leave today for the same place.

Children's day was appropriately observed at the Congregational church Sunday morning. A most excellent program was rendered by the children of the primary department. From which department were graduated eight little girls who have completed the graded work of the three years of that department. The entire program showed the untiring and most excellent labors of the superintendent of that department, Miss Jessie Snyder, and her able assistant, Mrs. A. A. Cleveland. The choir, so artistically played by Mrs. E. L. C. Match, was beautiful, as was the music by the choir.

The R. of P. Memorial day was observed by the local lodge of that order yesterday. Rev. A. W. Triggs of the First M. E. church preached a very able sermon fitting to the occasion, after which the graves of the departed brothers were decorated by a committee representing the lodge. Miss Lucy Hitchcock went to Lake Geneva Saturday to visit her sister a few days.

WOULD STRAIGHTEN OUT ALL TANGLES

Joseph E. Davies in Milwaukee for Conference With Democratic Leaders.

Democratic politics in Wisconsin is no less turbulent than it was before. Joseph E. Davies spent the day in the state trying to straighten out the tangle on the governorship and the United States senatorship. To be sure, Mr. Davies is still in Milwaukee (though not accessible to newspaper men), but indications are that even if he spends the summer in Milwaukee he will not be able either to reduce the number of aspirants for the senatorship or to pick a winner for governor.

At his suggestion one avowed candidate for senator and two tentative candidates met at the Plankinton house, Milwaukee, yesterday with Davies to discuss some method of eliminating one or more of the senatorial candidates, and incidentally to touch upon some phases of the gubernatorial fight. But the conference resulted in nothing.

Goes to Bed Cheerless.
Mr. Davies went to bed last night with a cheerless expression, and with the cheerless information that John A. Aylward, Paul O. Husting, Charles H. Weiss and probably Thomas J. Kearney are candidates for the United States senate, and that Judge J. C. Karel still holds the pole in the race for the democratic nomination for governor.

More than this, the talk of holding a democratic state convention without the approval of the state central committee was revived Sunday and Monday.

Mr. Davies reached Milwaukee from Ashland yesterday morning, where it is said he conferred with Burt Williams and other democrats of northern Wisconsin. He landed yesterday at the Milwaukee club with Edward C. Wall and Judge E. B. Dodge. This led to the report that he is consulting the old experienced hands in the party in the hope that they may offer a solution for the present tangle.

Davies Did Not Attend Meet.
Davies did not attend the conference at the Plankinton house. Those present at the meeting were Mr. W. W. Herron, who has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the democratic nomination for governor; Paul O. Husting; Charles H. Weiss; and John A. Aylward. It is understood that each of the aspirants for the senatorship felt that he was entitled to remain in the race, and that though it was suggested that some one of them should run for governor, all refused.

Mr. Davies will remain in Milwaukee through today, and probably other conferences will be held.

BLOODHOUNDS READY FOR MAN TRAILING

Janesville's Four-footed Detectives Will Be Ready for Police Work With Month's More Training.

Policeman Sam Brown received registration papers for two English bloodhounds yesterday, application being made to the American Kennel club last week. "Cal" and "Pat" were the names given to the hounds whom the police declare will be ready for working within a month's time.

Nearly every morning the hounds have been taken out in the outskirts of the city and trained to follow a scent. Despite the fact that they are only eight months of age, "Pat" and "Cal" show unusual ability at following the trail. Starting with an easy scent the distance was gradually lengthened until they are now capable of following a trail from three-quarters of an hour old and for a distance of three to four miles.

A wide circle is made by the runner and the dogs held until a good start is made. The trail the hounds are required to take for the last month has been no easy one to follow for the runner, had waded through water, through as many fences as possible, thickets and empty houses. Once they are put on the scent, the two hounds can pick up the trail so fast that they almost always catch up to the runner before he makes the complete circuit. The other day, when there was a strong wind blowing the dogs were turned loose when the runner was but two blocks from the starting point. After going about a block the dogs caught the scent through the air, abandoned the trail and made straight for the runner. How they can follow a trail that has been made through water is somewhat of a puzzle, for last week a trail was made in a creek for a quarter of a mile in shallow water.

This never stopped the dogs who got on the windward side of the water and obtaining the scent from stonies and grass bit by the runner in his wading found it quickly and were in full cry after using only a few moments time. With a few months more of training Policeman Brown is confident they will be able to surpass any bloodhounds in this section of the state for trail work. A harness has been made for them and "Pat" and "Cal" promise to become valuable adjuncts to the police department.

SCALY PSORIASIS ON ARMS AND LIMBS

Small Dots Grew Larger. Scales Formed. Looked Horrible. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Troop H. 6th U. S. Cavalry, Camp McCoy, Sparta, Wis.—"I was troubled with psoriasis for nearly two years. Portions of my arms and limbs were affected mostly with it. It appeared in scaly form, breaking out in very small dots and gradually grew larger and white scales formed when about the size of an ordinary match-head. The looks of it was horrible, which made it very unpleasant for me. It itched a little at times."

"I tried several remedies, but the trouble seemed to grow worse instead of better, and I tried several treatments which cured me for a month, but it always broke out again. One day a friend saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in the paper and I sent for a sample. They helped me, so I purchased two more boxes of Cuticura Ointment and some Cuticura Soap, and they completely cured me. It took three months for Cuticura Soap and Ointment to completely cure me." (Signed) Walter Matony, Oct. 23, 1912.

Although the Cuticura Soap and Ointment are most successful in the treatment of affections of the skin, scalp, hair and hands, they are also most valuable for everyday use in the toilet, bath and nursery, because they promote and maintain the health of the skin and hair from infancy to age. National Costumes Posing.
It is only among the very old in Wales and Ireland that the old costumes are worn. Of imperishable memory is the red Connemara colleen cloak, and the native Welsh dress is not less dear to the lovers of the picturesque, with its high pointed hat worn above a frilled lawn cap, the worsted shawl, the short petticoat, the white apron, the trim shoes. Only the extremely old women in Wales still wear the quaint "stovepipe."

The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth

By

ISABEL GORDON CURTIS

Author of "The Woman from Wolfartown"

Illustrations by Ellsworth Young

Copyright, 1914, by F. G. Brown & Co.

Enoch laid the manuscript aside. The Englishman, hearty in his congratulations and enthusiastic, was urging the earliest possible production. He offered unlimited money and insisted that the best company New York could produce should be engaged. The spell of the story was still upon Dorcas. She passed out, shaking hands hastily with Oswald.

"Dorcas," cried her brother. She did not answer.

"The play stirred her intensely," said Oswald. He had noticed a trace of tears on her cheeks. "Was this the first time she heard it read?"

"Yes, I had never even told her of it. She has been away while it was written."

"Is your sister an actress?"

"No—she wants to go upon the stage."

"Let her have her way," advised the Englishman. "Her every action shows that she possesses dramatic talent."

"It isn't my idea of her future."

"Stage life is exactly what one chooses to make of it. Curiously enough, I have a conviction she could play Cordelia."

Wentworth brushed his hand across his forehead and stared at the scattered sheets of manuscript on the table.

"Get Merry here as soon as possible. I want a consultation with both of you," suggested Oswald while he drew on his gloves. "It is now only a matter of time and a theater. If I may advise now, don't choose anyone on this side for Mrs. Esterbrook. I know a woman who can play that part to perfection. Again let me congratulate you. It's a great play, one of the greatest I've heard in years. It's bound to succeed."

Wentworth bowed, but a sudden flush blazed into his face. He was not hardened enough yet to accept congratulations for the brain product of another man.

"Good-by," said the Englishman, holding out his hand cordially.

"Good-by," murmured Wentworth. He moved to the window. A carriage stood waiting in front of the house. He watched Oswald step into it and drive away.

Suddenly he recollected that Dorcas had not spoken a single word of praise or congratulation on the play. She was always enthusiastic and happy over every triumph that came to him. She must have thought well of the play. She had a full appreciation of Merry's talents and she had seemed to like him while they were together during the summer. He paused to pull himself together mentally, then he called her. She came slowly into the room, which had grown dark.

"Dorcas," said Wentworth slowly, "do you know you have not said yet that you like—my play?"

"Your play?"

"Why, Dorcas?"

The girl spoke in an unsteady voice. "I don't believe, Enoch, that Andrew Merry told you of a long talk we had at Juniper Point. You remember you left me alone with him when you were called to Boston. We sat on the rocks one afternoon and he told me his plot for this play—he had been thinking it out for years and years. Why, the girl shook her head impatiently, "why, Enoch, he had labored on it so long that some of the speeches were written, in his mind. Sometimes he put the story into the very words you read!"

During a few minutes Enoch Wentworth fought the battle of his life. It was the struggle between good and evil, which every human being harbors to a greater or lesser degree, in one soul, in one body. Wentworth sighed. The battle had passed and evil had won. It was prepared to carry him through the most dangerous moment. With it came fresh valor, and not only the power to sin further, but a mysterious weakening of the moral tissues which made it possible for him to sin coolly and remorselessly. He turned on the light and with cool composure faced his sister. He met her gray eyes without a quiver. They asked a question which could not be evaded.

"I hate to tell you, Dorcas," there was a tone of reluctance in Wentworth's voice, "but Merry is down again, down in the gutter."

The girl jumped to her feet. "I don't believe it!" she cried. "Besides, if he were, what has that to do with his play?"

Enoch did not answer. Instead he asked a question. "Dorcas, do you care for—do you love—Andrew Merry?"

A flush blazed into the girl's face. In spite of the telltale color her brother believed her.

"Yes, I care for Andrew Merry—very much. I do not love him."

Enoch gazed at her wistfully. He knew, as she did not, how easy it is to cross the bridge from mere friendship to love.

"Why did you ask me that?"

"I wanted to find out how much it would hurt if I told you the truth. Merry is not worth your love, he is not even worth your friendship."

"It is not true!" There was indignant protest in the woman's voice. "I know better, so do you. Only this does not explain about his play, for it is his play."

"You remember he left Juniper Point suddenly?"

"Yes," she raised her head with an eager gesture. "He went away to write this play." She pointed to the manuscript which lay on the table.

"Yes," said Enoch slowly. "He began bravely enough. Then—he went under, as he had done so many times in his life."

"What was it?" cried the girl. "Drink or gambling?"

Enoch lay back in his chair. He began to marvel at how easily he could lie, because a lie had never come readily to him before.

"Drink and gambling—and everything." Her brother shrugged his shoulders as if in disgust. "Of course he stopped writing. A man could not write in his condition. He sent for me. I stayed by him night and day and wrote. You see—I wrote it."

He lifted a written sheet from the loose pile of manuscript. "Perhaps—but it is not your play." Dorcas shook her head with obstinate incredulity.

"I told him—no—I suggested. We make if a collaborated play."

"It is not even a collaborated play, Enoch. Why, every situation, the plot, even the very words, are his."

"He wants me to father it."

"He must have changed since he said good-by to me. He was on fire then with hope and ambition."

"He has changed," accented Enoch gravely. It was a relief to make one truthful statement.

"Je he to play 'John Esterbrook' when it is produced?"

"No other actor can. Merry has the entire conception of it now."

"Where is he?"

"I don't know."

"I thought you promised Mr. Oswald to have him here and get things started for an early production?"

"I did. I am hoping to find Merry at one of his haunts. He must be found and put on his feet. There's a tremendous lot at stake. Dorcas, he turned to her appealingly, "won't you help me?"

"I'll help you," Dorcas spoke slowly. "If you can assure me of one thing."

"What?"

"That there is no wrong to be done."

"There is no wrong to be done. Merry will have the opportunity of being not cheerful company, and he was racked by constant anxiety about Merry. There was not a single moment to spare when he could go into the highways and byways of a great city to search, as he had searched before when the man was his friend.

He could not delegate the task to another. He had prepared a tale for the public of Merry's whereabouts. Oswald believed the actor was studying his part and stood ready to appear at a moment's notice. Enoch went ahead with the tremendous load of detail that fell upon him, tolling day and night, while his mind alternated between terror and hope.

Every day the man was acquiring traits new to his nature. When a strange accident had tossed before him the possibility of satisfying his dearest ambition, conscience entreated loudly against the theft of another man's life-work. Every noble instinct in Enoch made its appeal; his honesty, his generosity, an innate demand for fair play, the love of his sister and friend, all cried aloud to him during the lonely hours of the night. There had been moments when he would have gladly retraced his steps, but the die had been cast. He was like a racer who, by some treacherous ruse, had pushed aside an opponent and was close to the goal. The intoxication of applause was beginning to sound in his ears and the future held untold possibilities. It was too late to turn back; it would mean the downfall of great ambitions and bitter shame—it might even mean crime. It seemed easier to take the chances.

Occasionally Andrew's dogged flash back to his memory when he cried, "I will see what the law can do to protect a man from theft."

Enoch felt his face blanch at the thought of it. Many a man had gone down and out for a crime less knavish than this. But he knew Andrew Merry well, and he trusted to one trait which was predominant in the man—his queer, exaggerated idea of honor.

Day by day his conscience quieted down, self-confidence took the place of wavering, and the fear of exposure seemed to recede. At last he could look the situation in the face without flinching. The task of putting on a theatrical production began to absorb him completely. He had always longed for such a chance; he had been storing away ideas he could now utilize, besides he knew New York thoroughly, and he had observed for years the system of producing a play. Oswald looked on with appreciation as Enoch put his plans into shape. He knew how uncommon was the combination of such talents in the same man—the ability to write a virtue play, then to stage it with practical skill and artistic feeling and originality. A remarkably strong company was engaged. Oswald insisted on filling even the smallest parts with people far above the level of subordinate actors. The salary list grew to stupendous figures. One morning Wentworth remonstrated against paying one hundred dollars a week to an actor who was to play the janitor.

"Green is a far bigger man than you need," he objected. "He has played leads to many of the biggest stars. We need a mere bit of character work in this—he isn't on the stage half an hour. I can get a first-rate man for half that price."

"Green can make the janitor so true to life that the audience will regret seeing him for only half an hour," Oswald rejoined. "That's the test of quality. When I pay a hundred dollars I want a hundred-dollar man."

Before the middle of October all the parts were in rehearsal except two. An Englishwoman, Zilla Paget, was crossing the Atlantic to play "Mrs. Esterbrook."

Oswald refused obstinately to give "Cordelia" to any actress that Wentworth suggested.

"We must close with somebody mighty quick," said Enoch, when Oswald had turned down Katherine Dean.

"Miss Dean is not even to be thought of," answered the Englishman decisively. "She's beautiful, but where's her feeling, her intelligence? I sat watching her face—the light fell strong upon her while you talked. There's absolutely nothing to her but beauty."

"She can act," insisted Wentworth. "I've seen her act. It isn't acting we want in 'Cordelia.' The woman who plays 'Cordelia' must have feeling, tender, compassionate understanding, dignity, with a young face—not a face into which youth is painted."

"Cordelia" must have beauty."

"We may get both. I am not searching for 'Cordelia' among the stars; I have hopes of finding her among the unknowns."

"That's a risky proposition," said Wentworth impatiently. "Cordelia" is a big part. Why, it's almost leading business—it ought to be in rehearsal now."

"Wait a few days," suggested Oswald. "Now, tell me, when is Merry to show up? He should have been here a week ago. Can't you wire him?"

Dinner Stories

Aunt Lindy has brought around her three grandchildren for her mistress to see.

The three little darkies, in calico smocks, stood squirming in line while Lindy proudly surveyed them.

"What are their names, Lindy?" her mistress asked.

"Ma'am, 'em. De bigges' one's name 'Gladolia. De nex' one, she names 'Heliothrepe. De littlest one, 'Artificial, ma'am."

She blushed very prettily as she walked into the tobacconist's big shop.

"Yes, madam?" said the assistant, smiling interrogatively, as they say in the best novels.

"I—er—oh, I want some cigars, please," she said hurriedly under her breath, hastening to add: "But—er—not for myself—for my husband."

"Certainly, madam. What kind would you like?"

"Oh, the best—quite the best please."

"Certainly, madam. Strong or medium?"

"The very strongest you've got, please," she answered in decided tones. "My husband was only complaining the other day that the last lot he got all broke in his pocket, so they had better be strong, hadn't they?"

And the young man behind the counter hadn't the heart to contradict her.

It was on a street car.

"Look here," said the inspector, "there are twelve people on the car and you've only got eleven fares rung up."

Wentworth bowed, but a sudden flush blazed into his face. He was not hardened enough yet to accept congratulations for the brain product of another man.

"Good-by," said the Englishman, holding out his hand cordially.

"Good-by," murmured Wentworth. He moved to the window. A carriage stood waiting in front of the house. He watched Oswald step into it and drive away.

Suddenly he recollected that Dorcas had not spoken a single word of praise or congratulation on the play. She was always enthusiastic and happy over every triumph that came to him. She must have thought well of the play. She had a full appreciation of Merry's talents and she had seemed to like him while they were together during the summer. He paused to pull himself together mentally, then he called her. She came slowly into the room, which had grown dark.

"Dorcas," said Wentworth slowly, "do you know you have not said yet that you like—my play?"

"Your play?"

"Why, Dorcas?"

The girl spoke in an unsteady voice. "I don't believe, Enoch, that Andrew Merry told you of a long talk we had at Juniper Point. You remember you left me alone with him when you were called to Boston. We sat on the rocks one afternoon and he told me his plot for this play—he had been thinking it out for years and years. Why, the girl shook her head impatiently, "why, Enoch, he had labored on it so long that some of the speeches were written, in his mind. Sometimes he put the story into the very words you read!"

During a few minutes Enoch Wentworth fought the battle of his life. It was the struggle between good and evil, which every human being harbors to a greater or lesser degree, in one soul, in one body. Wentworth sighed. The battle had passed and evil had won. It was prepared to carry him through the most dangerous moment. With it came fresh valor, and not only the power to sin further, but a mysterious weakening of the moral tissues which made it possible for him to sin coolly and remorselessly. He turned on the light and with cool composure faced his sister. He met her gray eyes without a quiver. They asked a question which could not be evaded.

"I hate to tell you, Dorcas," there was a tone of reluctance in Wentworth's voice, "but Merry is down again, down in the gutter."

The girl jumped to her feet. "I don't believe it!" she cried. "Besides, if he were, what has that to do with his play?"

Enoch did not answer. Instead he asked a question. "Dorcas, do you care for—do you love—Andrew Merry?"

A flush blazed into the girl's face. In spite of the telltale color her brother believed her.

"Yes, I care for Andrew Merry—very much. I do not love him."

Enoch gazed at her wistfully. He knew, as she did not, how easy it is to cross the bridge from mere friendship to love.

"Why did you ask me that?"

"I wanted to find out how much it would hurt if I told you the truth. Merry is not worth your love, he is not even worth your friendship."

"It is not true!" There was indignant protest in the woman's voice. "I know better, so do you. Only this does not explain about his play, for it is his play."

"You remember he left Juniper Point suddenly?"

"Yes," she raised her head with an eager gesture. "He went away to write this play." She pointed to the manuscript which lay on the table.

"Yes," said Enoch slowly. "He began bravely enough. Then—he went under, as he had done so many times in his life."

"What was it?" cried the girl. "Drink or gambling?"

Enoch lay back in his chair. He began to marvel at how easily he could lie, because a lie had never come readily to him before.

"Drink and gambling—and everything." Her brother shrugged his shoulders as if in disgust. "Of course he stopped writing. A man could not write in his condition. He sent for me. I stayed by him night and day and wrote. You see—I wrote it."

He lifted a written sheet from the loose pile of manuscript. "Perhaps—but it is not your play." Dorcas shook her head with obstinate incredulity.

"I told him—no—I suggested. We make if a collaborated play."

"It is not even a collaborated play, Enoch. Why, every situation, the plot, even the very words, are his."

"He wants me to father it."

"He must have changed since he said good-by to me. He was on fire then with hope and ambition."

"He has changed," accented Enoch gravely. It was a relief to make one truthful statement.

"Je he to play 'John Esterbrook' when it is produced?"

"No other actor can. Merry has the entire conception of it now."

"Where is he?"

"I don't know."

"I thought you promised Mr. Oswald to have him here and get things started for an early production?"

"I did. I am hoping to find Merry at one of his haunts. He must be found and put on his feet. There's a tremendous lot at stake. Dorcas, he turned to her appealingly, "won't you help me?"

"I'll help you," Dorcas spoke slowly. "If you can assure me of one thing."

"What?"

"That there is no wrong to be done."

"There is no wrong to be done. Merry will have the opportunity of being not cheerful company, and he was racked by constant anxiety about Merry. There was not a single moment to spare when he could go into the highways and byways of a great city to search, as he had searched before when the man was his friend.

He could not delegate the task to another. He had prepared a tale for the public of Merry's whereabouts. Oswald believed the actor was studying his part and stood ready to appear at a moment's notice. Enoch went ahead with the tremendous load of detail that fell upon him, tolling day and night, while his mind alternated between terror and hope.

Every day the man was acquiring traits new to his nature. When a strange accident had tossed before him the possibility of satisfying his dearest ambition, conscience entreated loudly against the theft of another man's life-work. Every noble instinct in Enoch made its appeal; his honesty, his generosity, an innate demand for fair play, the love of his sister and friend, all cried aloud to him during the lonely hours of the night. There had been moments when he would have gladly retraced his steps, but the die had been cast. He was like a racer who, by some treacherous ruse, had pushed aside an opponent and was close to the goal. The intoxication of applause was beginning to sound in his ears and the future held untold possibilities. It was too late to turn back; it would mean the downfall of great ambitions and bitter shame—it might even mean crime. It seemed easier to take the chances.

Occasionally Andrew's dogged flash back to his memory when he cried, "I will see what the law can do to protect a man from theft."

Enoch felt his face blanch at the thought of it. Many a man had gone down and out for a crime less knavish than this. But he knew Andrew Merry well, and he trusted to one trait which was predominant in the man—his queer, exaggerated idea of honor.

Day by day his conscience quieted down, self-confidence took the place of wavering, and the fear of exposure seemed to recede. At last he could look the situation in the face without flinching. The task of putting on a theatrical production began to absorb him completely. He had always longed for such a chance; he had been storing away ideas he could now utilize, besides he knew New York thoroughly, and he had observed for years the system of producing a play. Oswald looked on with appreciation as Enoch put his plans into shape. He knew how uncommon was the combination of such talents in the same man—the ability to write a virtue play, then to stage it with practical skill and artistic feeling and originality. A remarkably strong company was engaged. Oswald insisted on filling even the smallest parts with people far above the level of subordinate actors. The salary list grew to stupendous figures. One morning Wentworth remonstrated against paying one hundred dollars a week to an actor who was to play the janitor.

"Green is a far bigger man than you need," he objected. "He has played leads to many of the biggest stars. We need a mere bit of character work in this—he isn't on the stage half an hour. I can get a first-rate man for half that price."

Wentworth bowed, but a sudden flush blazed into his face. He was not hardened enough yet to accept congratulations for the brain product of another man.

"Good-by," said the Englishman, holding out his hand cordially.

"Good-by," murmured Wentworth. He moved to the window. A carriage stood waiting in front of the house. He watched Oswald step into it and drive away.
